

St. Cloud State University

theRepository at St. Cloud State

---

Jane Grey Wisshelm Letters

Archives Collections

---

1867

Letter, Jane Grey Wisshelm to unknown [March 1867]

Jane Grey Wisshelm

Follow this and additional works at: <https://repository.stcloudstate.edu/jswiss-letters>

---

Recommended Citation

Wisshelm, Jane Grey, "Letter, Jane Grey Wisshelm to unknown [March 1867]" (1867). Jane Grey Wisshelm Letters. 28.

<https://repository.stcloudstate.edu/jswiss-letters/28>

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Archives Collections at theRepository at St. Cloud State. It has been accepted for inclusion in Jane Grey Wisshelm Letters by an authorized administrator of theRepository at St. Cloud State. For more information, please contact tdsteman@stcloudstate.edu.

Wilkesburg, 7 March 32, 67

You Dear Old, Queen Old Yellow, go; I take my pen to let you know that my 'Old Pidge' here, Critie Jo is at the Table writing go. She wrote last week; but scratched an O: And so that letter did not go. Well, that young lady' he got a beau - was mine, some thirty years ago - The Swiss, of Swissvale, down below. He' he had a miff, two months or so, because to law poor I did go about a bit of land, you know. He ceased to visit little Jo. He did propose, to send, ho, ho! the Sheriff here, to give her notice she must come right down below to her own home, or I'd forego my wicked purpose; & keep Jo. I said, in answer, don't be slow; and the young girl shall go home to the valley, down below. - To day we're having quite a snow.

He stopped coming here; & nobody cried. She went down there weekly - no fat was fried: And when the "big scare" was thoroughly tried, back here to see her, the gentleman hid, when, finding that quinnery had wholly denied me part in the confab, he quickly espied, that something was wanting. Down went his pride. Up posted he, in his pocket, at side a great quart of ale, which, he said, must be tried, to make her grow stronger; & also, beside to cure my bad habit of being so wide. The mark of good health! What must shall bide? He smiled on her gently, with such loving pride! She kissed him! He stood & forlornly sighed, until, even I, could have "sat down and cried."

For months now just two we've all opened wide our eyes, every day, & have carefully pried into the papers to see on which side the Court had concluded that case to decide last Autumn so hastily started & tried between King & Jerg's son, who, side by side agreed to refer, nor argue a word, to the Court that's Supreme! Both parties were stirred with such a hot haste, they frankly avowed, to have a decision & no one demurred.

The Court must adjourn, & could not here stay to hear what the lawyers had got to say. In Philadelphia I would gather & lay the Law down plain, which no one might gain say. The mid, of this New year the second day; and now we all appear as far away from that decision as when first the hay was cut last Summer. Oh then, well-a-day! Who'd bear the doom of fortune - "Law's delay", ~~with~~ ~~the~~ ~~quintessence~~

~~With coming old age & going old friends~~ ~~With~~ the quinsy, dispepsia, diphtheria - age - and coming old age & going old friends - those gone who leave no one to make amends - with selfishness seeking its own small ends in the eye which withholds, the hand which extends - a welcome to scenes to which memory lends the rainbow of hope which so lovingly lends o'er childhood & youth, from which there depends the life's promise & well, I would & do! just hark! There's not a spot on Earth that's dark! Who makes one, buries in the clay; & scoops a care to that out day. My light's so clear that I'm afraid some other worm is in the shade unless the new new supply is measured by eternity. My happiness; & I have much, surpassed all I fancied such, when Hope built ladders to the sky to reach my rainbow, by & by. Through life I've labored, not for self, for duty, not for worldly puff. Each day brought work, & gave reward. My treasures, now, are with the Lord! Thieves cannot steal - rust cannot mar! They fear no change of peace or war. Worlds could not buy of me the deed. I, nothing having, nothing need. So, you might add the whole array - of in Hamlet's sentimental lay - of ills that this poor life down weigh. Then take his cowardice fear of death away; and in this world I'd choose to stay, as happy as the birds in May. Until I hear the charter day, "thy work is finished! Come away!"
Anne G. Swissheim

The Creator has decorated the rooms, in which he entertains company, with the most gorgeous draperies of clouds, with myriads of lights, hung on high, millions of mirrors, of Ocean, Lake, River & Streamlet to multiply them indefinitely, and with vistas of building loneliness. No portion of these walls are blank; and the meanest picture there mocks, by its inapproachable perfection, the proudest product of the painter's skill. Their carpets far no rivalry, from the looms of Turkey; & their cabinets supply, <sup>all these</sup> from their pagements, without detriment to the variety or abundance of their collections.

In these superb apartments, guests, whom no man can number, run over with exultance of life & joy. This is our Father's house; & we have made it our pleasant duty to aid Him in dispensing his munificent hospitality. When we turn from the contemplation of the wealth & glory of which, even here, we are made partakers, to aspire for the try imitations which we have seen but to withhold we are going back to "the higglerly elements of this world."

Margaret Angelen - by Sam G. Swissheim